A large, thick black letter 'd' is shown within a white rectangular frame. A vertical dashed line passes through its stem. A horizontal dashed line intersects the loop at its widest point. Two arrows indicate directions: one pointing downwards along the stem, labeled '2', and another pointing right from the end of the stem, labeled '①'.

なまえ

A vertical handwriting practice grid consisting of four horizontal rows. Each row features a vertical dashed line down the center and two horizontal dashed lines creating three equal segments. The first row contains the character 'う', the second row contains 'い', and the third row contains 'く'. All characters are written in a light gray color.

A handwriting guide for the Persian letter 'ت' (Teh) on a four-line grid. The letter is shown in three stages of formation: 1. A vertical stroke down from the top line to the baseline. 2. A diagonal stroke from the top line to the right side. 3. A curved hook starting from the top line and curving downwards and to the right. Arrows indicate the direction of each stroke.
